It will be well worth the trip through the row crops, vineyards, orchards, and hop yards of the Lower Yakima Valley to visit this traditional country farmhouse nestled above the small community of Harrah. In line with the most prominent characteristic of a farmhouse, you will be greeted by true farm country hospitality with a large porch stretching nearly the entire front of the home. From this front porch you will enjoy the incredible view of both Mt. Adams and Mt. Rainier. As you enter the house on oak hardwood floors, you will note the tremendous attention to detail in the interior to keep the warmth and cozy feel of a true farmhouse. A large country kitchen with an apron sink is a focal point of this home. It will be the place of some fabulous family gatherings, crowding generations around the table for family dinners. After dinner – depending on the season – the family can retire to the living room to enjoy the warmth of the redbrick fireplace or to the deck to take in the wonderful vista of the valley below. This is truly a family home. While the children are playing downstairs in the basement game room, mom and dad can relax in the library enjoying a favorite book. After a bedtime story in one of the four upstairs bedrooms, mom and dad can retreat to their master suite on the main level. There they can enjoy the special touches of the master bath including a walk-in tiled shower and a deep soaking tub, or they may spend time enjoying the view of the valley below from their own private deck.

The traditional country farmhouse has withstood the test of time. L & L Construction is proud once again to bring to you this charming farmhouse as another “home to come home to.”
